The 97 structural features selected in the Comparative Creole Syntax volume (Holm & Patrick 2007)

I. Unmarked verbs

In the Atlantic Creoles, verbs generally indicate tense and aspect not with inflections but rather with preverbal (in some cases postverbal) markers. The tense reference of verbs without such markers, \S_I , is normally to the time-reference point of the discourse – usually present or past – which is either understood or established at the outset. Whether the meaning of the verb is a state (stative), \S_I , I-2, or an action (non-stative), \S_I , 3-4, seems to be often related to the likelihood of its indicating the past.

- (I) I.I Statives with non-past reference
- (2) 1.2 Statives with past reference
- (3) 1.3 Non-statives with non-past reference
- (4) 1.4 Non-statives with past reference

2. Anterior (or past) tense

The marker for the anterior (and in some cases past) tense refers to something that took place before the time-reference point of the discourse, §2. Again, whether the verb indicates a state, §2.1, or an action, §2.2, seems related to the likelihood of its indicating the same time-reference point of the discourse, or a time before that. As can be seen from examples in the following chapters, sometimes the anterior marker can be used in a construction indicating the counterfactual or something that did not happen, corresponding in meaning to the English construction "We would have gone", §2.3. Such cases may overlap with conditionals, §6.2. In some Atlantic Creoles adjectives, §2.4, and locative phrases referring to place, §2.5, act as a predicate taking preverbal markers such as anterior.

- (5) 2.1 Statives with past reference
- (6) 2.2 Non-statives with (past-before-) past reference
- (7) 2.3 Anterior (or past) = counterfactual
- (8) 2.4 Anterior (or past) with adjective
- (9) 2.5 Anterior (or past) with locative

3. Progressive aspect

The marker of progressive aspect indicates that an action is going on; §3.1 reports whether such a marker exists. Sometimes it can indicate future, e.g., "I'm leaving tomorrow", §3.2. In some Creoles the anterior marker can precede the progressive marker to indicate the past progressive, e.g., "I was leaving", §3.3. Sometimes, the progressive marker can be used before an adjectival predicate to indicate that a state is inchoative, or just coming into being, e.g. "It's getting cold", §3.4.

- (10) 3.1 Indicating progressive
- (II) 3.2 Indicating future
- (12) 3.3 Anterior plus progressive
- (13) 3.4 Progressive with adjective = inchoative

4. Habitual marker

Markers of habitual aspect indicate that an action recurs, §4. Sometimes this is indicated by the absence of any aspect marker, §4.1, sometimes by the same form as the progressive marker, §4.2, and sometimes by a marker which is only used to indicate habitual aspect, §4.3. Such markers can often be preceded by the anterior tense marker to indicate a past habit, e.g., "He used to go there", §4.4.

- (14) 4.1 Zero marker for habitual
- (15) 4.2 Progressive marker for habitual
- (16) 4.3 Marker for habitual only
- (17) 4.4 Anterior plus habitual

5. Completive aspect

The marker of completive aspect shows that an action has been completed, §5. In some Creoles such markers can only occur without any other markers – either before or after the verb, §5.1, or possibly with an adjectival predicate, §5.2 – whereas in other Creoles the completive marker can co-occur with the anterior or other preverbal markers, §5.3.

- (18) 5.1 Completive only (before/after V)
- (19) 5.2 Completive plus adjective
- (20) 5.3 Anterior (or other preverbal markers) plus completive

6. Irrealis mode

The marker of irrealis mode indicates that a state or action is not (yet) a part of reality, 6, i.e. it refers to the future – in some Creoles taking the same form as the progressive marker, 6.1 – or (used after the anterior marker) it refers to the conditional, e.g., "We would go / would have gone", 6.2. This combination can sometimes also indicate the future in the past, e.g., "We said that we would go", 6.3, or the future perfect, e.g., "We will have gone", 6.4.

- (21) 6.1 Future (= progressive marker)
- (22) 6.2 Anterior plus irrealis = conditional
- (23) 6.3 Anterior plus irrealis = future in the past
- (24) 6.4 Anterior plus irrealis = future perfect

7. Other combinations of verbal markers

Besides the above combinations of verbal markers, some Creoles also feature the cooccurrence of irrealis and progressive markers to indicate continuous future, e.g., "We will be going", §7.1. Some can precede the latter with the anterior marker to indicate a continuous perfect conditional, e.g., "We would have been going", §7.2, while some have yet other combinations, §7.3, including modals.

- (25) 7.1 Irrealis plus progressive
- (26) 7.2 Anterior plus irrealis plus progressive
- (27) 7.3 Other auxiliary-like elements

8. Complementizers

Some Creoles have complementizers that mark infinitives, as in English: "We want to go", §8, while some do not, §8.1. Sometimes the word meaning 'for' can serve this function, §8.2, while in some Creoles this word can act like a modal indicating an arranged future or an obligation, e.g., "We are to go", §8.3. Sometimes this word acts as a subordinator introducing a tensed clause, like English so that: "We did it so that we could go", §8.4. Many Creoles have a complementizer introducing clauses which is derived from the lexifier's word for the subordinator that, e.g., "It's important that we go", §8.5. Some Creoles have a distinct word to introduce clauses after verbs of saying, thinking, or feeling, e.g., "I know that we're going", §8.6. Some Creoles allow omission of subordinators, §8.7.

- (28) 8.1 Zero infinitive marker
- (29) 8.2 'For' as infinitive marker
- (30) 8.3 'For' as a (quasi-) modal
- (31) 8.4 'For' introducing a tensed clause
- (32) 8.5 Subordinator from superstrate 'that'
- (33) 8.6 Distinct subordinator after verb of speaking
- (34) 8.7 Zero subordinator

9. Dependent clauses

Many Creoles have subordinate clauses that are not part of a larger matrix clause, §9.1, or that function within such a clause as a noun phrase, §9.2. Most also have relative clauses in which the relativizer or relative pronoun functions as the subject, §9.3, the direct object, §9.4, or the object of a preposition, §9.5. Some allow certain relativizers or relative pronouns to be omitted, §9.6.

- $(\mathbf{35}) \hspace{0.2cm} \textbf{9.1 Subordinate clauses} \hspace{0.2cm} (\textbf{non-embedded})$
- (36) 9.2 Subordinate clauses (embedded)
- (37) 9.3 Relative clauses (relative pronoun = subject)
- (38) 9.4 Relative clauses (relative pronoun = direct object)
- (39) 9.5 Relative clauses (relative pronoun = object of a preposition)
- (40) 9.6 Relative clauses (zero relative pronoun)

10. Negation

Many Creoles have a single particle next to the verb or verb phrase to negate it, §10.1, but some also have another negator at the end of the utterance, §10.2. Some Creoles use negative forms of indefinite pronouns and quantifiers after a negated verb,

- e.g., "We don't have none", §10.3.
- $(\textbf{4I}) \hspace{0.1 in} \textbf{10.I Single negation} (verbal) \$
- (42) 10.2 Discontinuous double negation
- (43) 10.3 Negative concord

11. Passive

Not all Creoles have a passive construction parallel to that in their lexifier, e.g.,

"That house was built last year", §11.1; many instead use an adjective equivalent, e.g.,

- "They built the house last year", §11.2.
- (44) II.I Passive construction
- (45) II.2 Passive equivalent

12. Adjectives: verbs?

In some basilectal Creoles certain non-verbal predicates behave syntactically like verbs, §12: adjectives may take preverbal markers, §12.1, as may nouns, §12.2, and locative phrases, §12.3. For emphasis, some Atlantic Creoles may have predicate clefting, in which a predicate that is either an adjective, §12.4, or a verb, §12.5, moves to the front of the sentence after a highlighter, §13.5, and is followed by the original sentence. Other verbal behavior of adjectives includes comparison as a verb in a serial verb construction, §14, with the word equivalent to 'pass', §12.6, as opposed to comparison as an adjective as in the lexifier language, §12.7.

- (46) 12.1 Preverbal markers before adjectives
- (47) 12.2 Preverbal markers before nouns
- (48) 12.3 Preverbal markers before locatives
- (49) 12.4 Predicate clefting: adjectives or adjectival verbs
- (50) 12.5 Predicate clefting: other verbs
- (51) 12.6 Comparison with 'pass'
- (52) 12.7 Comparison as in superstrate

13. The copula

The term 'copula' is used loosely to correspond to most uses of English be, §13. Many Atlantic Creoles have different words for the copula before predicate nouns, e.g., "She is my sister", §13.1, before locative expressions, e.g., "She is in Kingston", §13.2, and before adjectives, e.g., "She is nice", §13.3. Some Creoles have highlighters, particles that appear before other words to draw attention to them, these can be used before interrogatives, §13.4, or in other constructions, §13.5. The existential meaning of There is' can be conveyed with the equivalent "(It) have", §13.6.

- (53) 13.1 Equative copula
- (54) 13.2 Locative copula (with expression of place)
- (55) 13.3 Zero copula with adjective
- (56) 13.4 Highlighter with question words
- (57) 13.5 Highlighter with other structures
- (58) 13.6 Existential ('have' = 'there is')

14. Serial verbs

Some Creoles have constructions consisting of two or more verbs with the same subject but not linked as they might be in a European language, i.e., with a conjunction or an infinitive marker, §14. In some cases one of the verbs means 'go' and indicates that the action of the verb takes place in a direction away from the speaker, §14.1, or means 'come' indicating motion towards, §14.2. Another such construction uses the verb meaning 'give' to indicate to whom, or for whom, an action was done, §14.3. Another uses the verb meaning 'say' to introduce a clause after a verb of speaking or thinking, §14.4. Another uses the verb 'pass' to indicate 'more than' after verbs, including adjectival verbs in a comparison, §14.5. In some Creoles the verbs in such constructions can number three, §14.6, or four or even more, §14.7.

- (59) 14.1 Directional with 'go'
- (60) 14.2 Directional with 'come'
- (61) 14.3 Serial 'give' meaning 'to, for'
- (62) 14.4 Serial 'say' meaning 'that'
- (63) 14.5 Serial 'pass' meaning 'more than'
- (64) 14.6 Three serial verb constructions
- (65) 14.7 Serial verb constructions with 4 or more verbs

15. Noun phrase

In the noun phrase, many Creoles use nouns without a determiner to refer to the whole category, §15.1. Some Creoles have an indefinite article, §15.2, or a definite article derived from a demonstrative determiner in the lexifier language, §15.3. Some Creoles use the personal pronoun meaning 'they' after nouns to indicate plurality, §15.4, and some use this plural marker after nouns referring to a person to indicate that person's usual associates, $\S_{15.5}$. Most Creoles have demonstrative determiners, $\S_{15.6}$, but in a few they occur at the end of a noun phrase along with the definite article or plural marker, $\S_{15.7}$, even when the noun phrase includes a relative clause, $\S_{15.8}$. In some Creoles adjectives precede nouns, $\S_{15.9}$, while in others they follow them, $\S_{15.10}$. Creoles almost never have gender agreement between nouns and their modifiers, $\S_{15.11}$.

- (66) 15.1 Bare nouns (generic, definite)
- (67) 15.2 Indefinite article
- (68) 15.3 Definite article
- (69) 15.4 Plural marker (= 'they')
- (70) 15.5 Personal noun plus plural marker
- (71) 15.6 Demonstrative
- (72) 15.7 Demonstrative plus definite or plural
- (73) 15.8 Relative clause followed by definite or plural marker
- (74) 15.9 Prenominal adjective
- (75) 15.10 Postnominal adjective
- (76) 15.11 Gender agreement

16. Possession

Some Creoles express possession between nouns without any inflections: the noun that is possessor simply precedes the noun that is possessed, §16.1. Other Creoles use a preposition meaning 'of' (which may be optional) after the noun that is possessed, e.g., "the house of Maria", §16.2. Some Creoles indicate possession with a possessive adjective or determiner after the possessor, e.g., "Purchas his pilgrimage", §16.3. Creoles may have possessive adjectives or determiners like "my" occurring before nouns, §16.4, or possessive pronouns of a distinct form like "mine", §16.5. In some Creoles possessive adjectives may be replaced by possessive pronouns for emphasis, §16.6.

- (77) 16.1 Nouns: juxtaposition [possessor + possessed]
- (78) 16.2 Nouns: preposition [possessed (of) possessor]
- (79) 16.3 Nouns: possessive adjective [possessor HIS possessed]
- (80) 16.4 Possessive adjectives: prenominal
- (81) 16.5 Possessive pronouns: distinct
- (82) 16.6 Possessive pronouns as emphatic possessive adjective

17. Pronouns: case distinctions

Creole pronouns may indicate distinctions of case (like subject "he", object "him", possessive "his") less frequently than the pronouns in their lexifier languages do. This section surveys such distinctions in the pronouns meaning "I" in §17.1, "you [singular]" in §17.2, "he / she / it" in §17.3, "we" in §17.4, "you [plural]" in §17.5, and "they" in §17.6. Some Creoles have reflexive pronouns that differ from those in their lexifier languages, e.g., "He hurt his body" instead of "He hurt himself", §17.7. In some Creoles question words like "where?" consist of two morphemes with compositional or semantically transparent meaning, e.g. "What place?", §17.8. Creoles have relativizers or relative pronouns, but they may differ from those of their lexifiers, §17.9.

- (83) 17.1 Personal pronouns: first person singular
- (84) 17.2 Personal pronouns: second person singular
- (85) 17.3 Personal pronouns: third person singular

- (86) 17.4 Personal pronouns: first person plural
- (87) 17.5 Personal pronouns: second person plural
- (88) 17.6 Personal pronouns: third person plural
- (89) 17.7 Reflexive pronouns: distinct forms
- (90) 17.8 Interrogative pronouns: some bimorphemic
- (91) 17.9 Relative pronouns

18. Coordinating conjunctions

Some Creoles have different words for 'and' when it joins whole sentences, $18.1, as opposed to parts of sentences, $18.2.

- (92) 18.1 'And' joining sentences
- (93) 18.2 'And' joining sentence parts: different

19. Prepositions

Some Creoles have a preposition (or a postposition after a noun) with general meaning of location, e.g., 'in', 'on', 'at', 'to', or even 'out of, §19.1. Some require no prepositions before places after verbs of motion, e.g., "Matilda run ___ Venezuela", §19.2.

(94) 19.1 General locative preposition (or postposition)

(95) 19.2 Zero preposition with motion verbs plus place

20. Miscellaneous

Most Creoles have no inversion of the subject and the verb (or auxiliary) to indicate a question, $\S_{20.1}$. A number use "-o" at the end of a sentence to signal heightened relevance or connectedness between the speaker and the person spoken to, $\S_{20.2}$.

- (96) 20.1 Word order: questions SVO
- (97) 20.2 Sentence-final -0
